A CASE OF LEPROSY.

Philadelphia Physicians in Consultation Over the Victim.

Wealthy Planter From Honolulu Sent For Medical Treatment, Discovers His Awful Condition.

Philadelphia Herald.

About two weeks ago a gentleman of pleasing address presented himself to the most eminent surgeon of Americs, Dr. Samuel D. Gross, of this city, ics, Dr. Samuel D. Gross, of this city, having letters from two physicians of the Sandwich Islands. The man was well dressed, and evidently accustomed to good society, but notwithstanding these advantages the impression he produced by his appearance was not agreeable. The skin of his face was of a dirty, sallow color, and oily and shiny. His eyes were heavy, the lids drooping and labby, and his nose dark-red in color. The evidences of a premature old age were too strongthe dreaded disease of the tropics, n the opinion of the doctor of Honoseek the best medical advice. The o Honolulu, where he was born to Honoldiu, where he was born thirty-four years ago. Dr. Gross, after a careful examination of the case, referred the patient to Dr. John V. Shoemaker, and the un-fortunate was taken to the hospital for skin diseases, on Locust street. Here he told the story of his life. He is a plauter of ample wealth, whose early manhood and much of his fortune were spent in excessive dissipation. He led a merry life for some years, especially among the women of easy virtue on the island. Eight years ago he became sensible to a decided loss of health, and he now recalls a fact to which he paid no attention at the time. A dead spot of skin was bove the knee. Six months later, when he had almost forgotten his former indisposition, he married a native lady of Honolulu, who was a his whole face is of vermillon hue, woman in vigorous health. Within a year a weak, puny child was born, which lived but a few weeks. In the meantime the spot of dead akin shooting pains ran through them. Send Within a year, however, the pain was succeeded by a sensation of deadness in his extremities, and he was scarcely able to distinguished solid substances. This was followed by the appearance of blisters on his fingers and toes. Medical treatment failed to check the disease, and he grew worse and worse, and his presence in Philadelphia is the result. His condition now is horrible to contemplate.

His hands and toes have no sensation, and when needless were stuck into his extremities by Superintendent F. C. Waterman, the patient said he did not feel them. In short, the case was found to be well-defined leprosy, which had begun in the armsthetic form and gradually passed into the more dreadful stages of the disease. Dr. Shoemaker prescribed remedies to tone up the digestive organs, and solutions to apply locally to the spots affected. Out door exercise to occupy his mind as much as possible was especially urged. In three days the patient returned to the hospital looking somewhat brighter, but that was all. Dr. Shoemaker invited a number of physicians and some of the students of the hospital to examine the unfortunate man. Only a few responded,

The result of the consultation was disease, by proper hygienic measures, might be alleviated, but not cured. Dr. Shoemaker then advised his patient to seek some agricultural district in a cold region, in Minnesota or the mind and body both employed. With this advice, he was asked to call again in two days. The man listened to what was said to him as one who hears the sentence of his doom. He trembled and gasped for breath For the first time he learned that his was to tice. be a fate worse than death. His emotions overcame him, and burying his head in his hands he sat for a long time as if truth. When he had gained sufficient composure he said that he had no idea that he was suffering from leprosy. All the way from Honolulu he had from society; that he was cursed with the most losthsome of diseases; that he was to be hunted down for isolation-appeared almost to have overhad the slightest effect upon his excited condition. Finally he went away. The next day he returned to the hospital nervous, gloomy, pros-trated. He begged that his condition would be kept secret. Every moment he would glance around as if fearing he would be seized and he would repeat mournfully, "Hunted down for isolation." At last he consented to start on a hurrled trip through the country to divert his mind, and make arrangements to change his place of residence. H left the city two days ago.

Before his departure he visited the hospital, and as if in distraction made most extravagant offers for such treat-ment as might cure him. He said that no sum would be too large if the the awful disease could be eradicated. He offered to give his fortune to the last penny for an assurance of a res-toration to health, but he was told that it was impossible. This is the LADY BLANDFORD'S DIVORCE.

Dramatic Scenes in the Court Room at Kilmainham. Dublin, February 11, Dispatch to the London

The scene in the court house of Kilmainham yesterday was one of strange and thrilling interest. They looked aghast, and in them confusion and despair were betrayed in every look, though they sometimes made an effort to appear indifferent. As the witness related each incident of the dreadful story, and identified the the prisoners, whom he named, their countenances reflected in the dark shadows which passed across them.

Lady Blandford wrote to him, asking him to reconsider what he had said and pointing out the trouble and difficulty in which he had placed her and the children. In reply he wrote her a long letter, in which he said, "I reproach you with nothing, except I could never love you very truly," and "You have been far better than I have been." In answer to that letter she wrote him another, and, after a further communication by letter, they met at the Leatherhead station on the 8 h of March. In the meantime her family had become very anxious that some proceedings should be taken against Lord Blandford, but Lady Blandford clung when he would return to her, and for the sake of her children she was anxions that there should not be a divorce. For a long time it was impossible to bring Lord Blandford to any arrangement, and in February of the year 1878 a petition was presented by Lady Blandford for a judicial separation. That petition was not proceeded with, because, in March of the same year, a private deed of separation was executed. But Lady Blandford did not up living with Lady Aylesford, and that the latter had returned to her family, she wrote to him from Biarritz on the 27th of March, 1878, suggesting that they should have a meeting at Bayonne, and assuring him that she would forgive and forget his conduct in the past if he gave up Lady Aylesford altogether and returned to his wife and children. After a written correspondence they met at the Hotel Westminster, in Paris, on the 13th of May, 1878 was agreed between them that they should resume cohabitation but it was arranged that the cohabitation should not be resumed until the suit of Lord Aylesford against his wife for adultery with Lord Blandford had been disposed of. The Growth of the Northwest. Oregon newspapers, reviewing the events of the past year, show the existence of a remarkable degree of prosperity in that state. Ten years age the population of Portland was less than 12,000. To-day it is nearly three times that number and is con tinually increasing. During 1882 $4,000,000 was spent upon new buildings in that city, and $300,000 on its streets. Its wholesale trade for the year amounted to $40,000,000, and the exports to $23,128,981.

Equally favorable reports come from Washington territory, whose vast forests of valuable timber furnish an article of export that is wanted in all parts of the world. Thirty years ago Puget sound's first saw mill was built. To day there are numerous towns in which lumber sawing is the main industry. She wanted to go to Burlington to see her children. Some incident of a trifling nature had made her resolve to leave that evening. I was glad to have it so, as I did not want to go to the theater. So I made my excuses to Lincoln, and at the proper hour we started for the train. As we were driving along Pennsylvania avenue a horseman drove past us on a gallop, and back again around our carriage looking into it. Mrs. Grant said: There is the man who sat near us at lunch to-day, with some other men and tried to overhear our conversation. He was so rude that we left the dining room. Here he is now riding after us.' I thought it was only curiosity, but learned afterward that the horseman was Booth. It seems hat I was to have been attacked and Mrs. Grant's sudden resolve to leave changed the plan A few days after I received an anonymous letter from a man saying that he had been detailed to kill me, that he rode on my train as far as Havre de Grace, and as my car thanked God that he had failed. I remember that the conductor had locked our car, but how true the letter was I cannot say. I learned of the assassination as I was passing through Philadelphia. I turned around, took a special train and came on to Washington. It was the gloomlest day of
